ImperialOak™ Engineered Oak Timber Flooring

ImperialOak™ features some of the most desirable and exotic floors on the market. Oak timber features appealing grain markings, a typical density of 0.75 g/cm³, great strength and hardness, very resistant to insect and fungal attack because of its high tannin content and coupled with meticulous work done by hand on the floor surface, such as hand scraping, brushing, staining and lacquering, helps create a unique, appealing and highly sought after flooring.

There is no substitute for a genuine oak flooring surface. You will be buying a desirable, exotic and limited flooring that will be the envy of others.

Warranty

ImperialOak™ engineered flooring comes with 25 years residential structural warranty. Throughout the entire manufacturing process, each ImperialOak™ floorboard are scrutinized under the strictest quality control standards. Warranty applies only to the original purchaser in the original manufactured and purchased condition, to be free from milling defects and delamination for 25 years. Any damage including but not limited to improper transportation, storage, handling, installation and job site conditions is not covered under this warranty.

ImperialOak™ Engineered Flooring Composition

ImperialOak™ features a very stable multi-ply structure, which incorporates a tried and tested tongue and groove joint system that creates a final appearance that is almost indistinguishable from solid hardwood timber flooring.

The top layer consists of a 3mm or 4mm of solid oak veneer.

This layer has been either brushed, lacquered, smoked, stained or distressed to produce a very desirable surface layer and a solid plank look. This veneer allows for multiple re-sandings as well.

The middle layer consists of a 10mm multiple plywood construction.

This layer gives superior rigidity to the floorboard which minimises cupping and shrinkage.

The bottom layer consists of a 2mm plywood backing.

This layer helps to minimise bowing and bending of the floorboard.
